Happy New Year!

Here is a Happy New Year for everybody! It is all over with old 1915, for 1916 will be on the job in a day.

We trust that the New Year will be one of many joys and no sorrows. In making your resolutions for the New Year we want to suggest: Be sure to place great stress on buying your footwear here!

Such a resolution will insure you against wearing poor shoes as well as against paying too much for shoes.

We are ready to do our share to make 1916 a very happy year for both your feet and your purse.

RAYNOLDS WILL MANAGE BANKING INTERESTS HERE

Veteran Financier to Retire From El Paso Institution of Which He Is President and Move to Albuquerque.

It was announced today by one of the officials of the First National bank, confirming dispatches from El Paso, that Joshua R. Reynolds, for many years president of the First National bank of El Paso and the institution of the same name of this city, would retire from the presidency of the El Paso institution January 11, 1916, and would assume charge of the local bank shortly after.

The reasons for the action, it was said, were two-fold. Mr. Reynolds wishes to give more attention to the local bank, because of the death recently of two of its executive officers, and the Clayton banking act prohibits the president of any bank from being an officer or director of another bank. Mr. Reynolds did not wish to give up his presidency of the local institution.

Mr. Reynolds' successor in El Paso will be James G. McNary, his son-in-law. Mr. McNary formerly was editor of the Las Vegas Optic. He has been an active force in the El Paso bank for a number of years and will continue the existing policy of that institution.

No changes in the personnel of the local bank are expected as a result of Mr. Reynolds' coming here. Mr. Reynolds has been spending the holidays here, returning recently to El Paso.

No changes in the active management of the institution will result from the transfer of Joshua Reynolds' headquarters from El Paso to this city. It was stated at the First National bank today. Mr. Reynolds is president of the First National and also of the First National bank of El Paso, and announcement has been made that early next month he will resign from the headship of the Paso City institution to devote his time to the First National here.

Mr. Reynolds has been president of the First National for years, but during the lifetime of M. W. Flournoy active leadership in the bank's everyday affairs rested in the latter's hands. Mr. Flournoy was succeeded as vice president by Guy Rogers, and President Reynolds' coming, it was stated at the bank today, would in no measure curtail Vice President Rogers' work as active head of the bank. President Reynolds was chiefly impelled to plan the proposed move, it was said, by the fact that most of his family live here and he has a sentimental regard for the city that led him to welcome a chance to make it his actual home.

The resignation of Mr. Reynolds as president of the El Paso bank will take effect, it is expected, at the annual meeting to be held January 11. First Vice President James G. McNary is slated to succeed him as president.
